

Overall system structure of the UML did not change much, but rather individual variables and functions were added and taken away throughout the process of development in an adaptive way to best fit the problem set.